Managing your Receivables and Collections
The longer you let delinquent accounts sit, the more difficult it is for us to collect. According to a past survey of members of the Collection Agency Association of the Commercial Law League of America, the probability of collecting delinquent accounts drops dramatically with the length of delinquency. For example, after three months, the rate drops to 69.6%, after six months the rate drops to 52.1% and after a year, the rate drops to 22.8%. Based on this information, taking positive action will help increase the chances of your accounts being collected.

Hope to See You There!!!
